Well, here we are but a few short weeks away from CANvention 41. With all the recent releases, it looks to be a good place to pick up some bottles. Having missed the last CANvention, I can't wait to get back on that trade floor!

Speaking of the trade floor, this year we will once again have a chapter sales table set up in the hallway outside. We will be selling raffle tickets, taking renewals, and possibly selling new chapter t-shirts. Brad is currently working the t-shirt designs so we should have some neat shirts come CANvention time. Our new VP (Joe Hobaugh) has picked up some real neat prizes this year so the raffle should be a doozy! Be sure to stop by, buy some stuff, hang-out and talk shop, or just shoot the breeze. While you're there, be sure to pick up your ABC sticker to place on your floor pass. As if we need another reason for you to stop by the table, we'll be handing out a nice freebie to all renewing members. Hope to see you there!

Our annual meeting of the minds, will be held on Thursday at 5 pm. At this time I can't tell you anymore than that, however when you get your CANvention packet in the mail, you will be able to find out what room it will be held in. Awhile back, I sent out an email to everyone in order to get a feel for how many of you who are planning to attend this year's CANvention. Out of 150 members, I received the following numbers: yes - 61, no - 42, and maybe - 8. Now those numbers might vary slightly by the time CANvention rolls around, but it still looks good. For those of you who took the time to respond, I thank you!

I may just be looking through rose-colored glasses, but it looks as if we might just be getting a much-needed boost in the arm from Miller Lite. They have just released several football bottles that carry the same colors of the Atlanta Falcons, Green Bay Packers and Cincinnati Bengals. There is no mention of the teams, but it is quite evident on what they are doing. As Yogi Berra said, "It's like déjà-vu all over again"! Can you say Fan-Can! This could definitely cause a collector frenzy come CANvention time. For those of you who didn't make it to the Springfield CANvention, the Fan-Cans were a highly traded item, with people scrambling to pick up all the variations. This could very well take the limelight away from the micro can collectors. We can only hope! It almost makes you want to start drinking that stuff just to boost their marketing.....just kidding Lite fans! Keep an eye out for any and all memorabilia that might go along with these new bottles.

A surprising and welcome new release of the three "Legend" bottles from a micro brewery out of California is also good news for our niche in the hobby. Right now there is not too much information concerning distribution or the brewery itself, but I'm sure this will come in time. Take a look at the photos in Spinney's column.

Like I said earlier, I hope to see you all at the CANvention. In the meantime, enjoy the newsletter!

Chapter Tid-Bits

End of Snail Mail: This is the last snail mail (USPS delivery) newsletter. As outlined in the Feb-Apr edition the board passed a change to Chapter By-Law 8.a. to eliminate the newsletter hard copy printing and mailings. Those members currently receiving snail mail newsletters will be automatically granted one free year of dues. Any member who has paid in advance for snail mail delivery will be credited that amount in yearly dues and also receive an additional year. Any member paid in advance for snail mail who wishes to cancel their membership will be refunded.

Those members affected by this change will need to contact our Secretary, Butch Kroskey once you have obtained an email or have secured a means to retrieve the newsletter via the internet.

Chapter Meeting: The annual ABC Chapter CANvention meeting will be on Thursday, September 1 @ 5pm in the Madison II Room.

Chapter Raffle: This year we will be having a raffle at our chapter table. The raffle will be on Friday, September 2 at about 4pm. We will be selling raffle tickets during our chapter meeting and at the chapter table on Thursday and Friday. We have a pretty good assortment of prizes starting to accumulate, including a Bud Light Thanksgiving 500462, but we could use a few more. If anyone has anything they would like to donate to the raffle get a hold of Joe or Butch.

Chapter Table: Volunteers are also needed again to staff the chapter table. We will have the table open during floor hours till 4pm on Friday when we do the raffle. If anyone would be interested in helping out, contact Bob.

Newsletter Editor Needed: I announced in the last newsletter that I would be stepping down as Newsletter Editor. Also I was looking for someone to step-up and take on the task. To date, no one seems to be interested although that was to be expected. I will not leave the chapter hanging so until someone decides they would like to take it over, I'll stay on. Don't be surprised if you see me running around at CANvention actively recruiting, hint, hint....

QR Code: What the heck is a QR code? In short it stands for Quick Response code, a specific matrix barcode that is readable by scanners and smart phones. The ABC Chapter now has their own and when scanned by your i-Phone/Droid/whatever, will take you directly to the ABC Chapter website. These will start to show up on all our printed documents and they also make a great marketing tool. Be on the lookout for these and if you're on the smart phone bandwagon, give it a try....

Obscure Law Makes Aluminum Beer Bottles Illegal

Earth-friendly New Yorkers that drink beer at sporting events out of aluminum bottles are not only likely to yell at someone before the night is over, they also happen to be breaking the law. According to an obscure 1982 law, called The Bottle Law, aluminum bottles are technically illegal in New York.

The crime is actually all in the caps. The Bottle Law came into effect to prevent the use of pull tab cans, because those tabs present a danger to animals who would choke on them once they were discarded. Any bottle metal beverage container that didn't come with an attached lid was outlawed. Aluminum bottles were introduced later as an answer; they're also easy to recycle and refrigeration units use less energy to keep them cold.

Apparently, even state lawmakers were unaware of the Bottle Law until beer industry execs approached them recently about changing it. As of now, the amendment awaits Governor Cuomo's signature before it becomes official.

Perhaps once the Governor gets this signed finding aluminum bottles in New York state will be a little easier. Never knew collecting could lead criminal activities....

My Collection

Jose De Freitas ABC# 034

I started collecting aluminum bottles long before Budweiser came out with their aluminum beer bottles. I guess my first bottles were the German Bomber's pin up girls and French bottles that came out about 20 years ago. It was fun saving these bottles that had no paper labels on them with the beautiful graphics.

But because there were few beer bottles to choose from I started looking for other aluminum containers with similar shape and style. I started looking in stores for bottles like hair spray, shaving cream, air fresheners and other products. I was amazed at what other products were sold in aluminum bottles. I found wine, other alcohol bottles, water, body spray, the list goes on and on.

The sizes vary widely, my biggest bottle is a milk bottle from the 60's I bought in a garage sale for $20 and my smallest is a 38 ml body spray bottle (see photo to left).

I also have a nice small collection of Coca Cola aluminum bottles, Vodka and wine bottles.

I have 426 beer, 36 Mountain Dew, 19 Pepsi and several dozen non beverage bottles.

I think all can collectors should take back their cans for recycle and keep only aluminum bottles.

Next time you shop at Walmart or your favourite store keep an eye out for any new aluminum bottle treasures. They tend to show up in all sorts of packages.

What's New

Jerome Spindler ABC# 006

Hi All, Miller Lite has released several new bottles recently. These include; NASCAR's Brickyard 400 redemption bottle 839228, a really nice looking bottle with a checkered flag design around the neck. Next, we have two variations of the 2011 Copa Oro soccer bottle, including a 3.2% bottle 839406 and a redemption bottle 839407. You want to make sure you grab both of these. New to this year's baseball teams come the Detroit Tigers, again, a very sharp redemption bottle 839373.

They have also released three new bottles for the upcoming football season. Hard to believe it is that time of year already. The bottles do not have team emblems on them but they are the team colors of the Atlanta Falcons 839434, Green Bay Packers 839435 and Cincinnati Bengals 839409. Funny thing is that the packaging does have the team names as well as their emblems on them. Since AB is the sole NFL sponsor I think they had to use an idea from AB-InBev's playbook with the team pride cans. Look to see more of these released soon as I'm sure Miller will do whatever they can to keep their market share in the NFL towns.

We also have 3 new bottles from Legends Beer, a micro brewery out of California. These bottles are really nice and we will see more from this brewer. So far they have released bottles for Peter Townend (surfer), Larry Holmes (boxer) and Gordie Howe (hockey). From information obtained it looks as if they plan to do several more bottles highlighting legends from different genres (more sports, music, etc...) Check out their website (where you can also purchase bottles) at <http://www.legendsbeer.com/> for more information.

I hope to see you all at the National CANvention, always a great time.

Later, Spin

Foreign Bottles

Juan Carlos De Marco ABC# 031

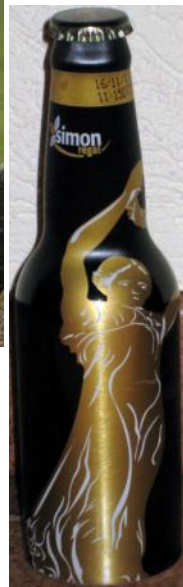

New cabottles are not as prevalent as they once were, but outside of the United States designs are getting better, more stylish and attractive. These examples prove that to be the absolute truth.

DESPERADOS - France: Slowly but steadily, the famous French beer with tequila is finding their identity with these 330ml bottles especially this example of the "Hors Serie 2011" produced by Brasserie "Fischer."

This edition features a sober contrast to the multicolored variation that preceded it.

SAN MIGUEL - Spain: No rest for Spanish designers. Continuing the tradition to launch limited edition commemoratives give us the "Love Surf" and "Sella", which retain a familiar style to its predecessors. The increasing production of bottles from Spain is getting close to putting them second only to the United States.

SIMON REGAL - Luxembourg: All eyes are always placed on the bottles of this small country. Those who have been there, know that these bottles are found in very few bars in the capital and usually a very short run, as the super-limited editions are known for. The artistic quality of its design goes hand in hand with the quality of its content.

JJ DE WEERT - The Netherlands: The "Augustinus 1" is the first to appear on the Dutch market after "Stella Artois", who were the only producers in aluminum bottles for a while. It seemed odd that Holland's historic brewing tradition wouldn't have several cabottles on market, so we celebrate the appearance of this beautiful bottle, and wish that other cabottles come to increase the flow of Dutch production.

ALFA - Netherlands: Almost by chance, while featuring the JJ de Weert, one of the oldest brewers in the Netherlands was seduced by these new types of containers. Luckily they decided to give them a run so we now have this beautiful example. Almost certainly other breweries will enter the market for aluminum bottles as the price of the material has dropped sharply.

COOL - Portugal: A new refrigerator to keep cool drinks, launched by the brand Cool, who along with their new edition of cans and cabottle, shake up the market a little for our joy.

See you guys in Covington !!!!

What's New in A-B?!

Brad Ambruso ABC# 007

We were pleasantly surprised to see the Bud Light 'UFC' for Canada released earlier this year. They wasted no time in following up with a US version. Real similar to the Canadian version with Spanish writing on one side.

With both the NHL and NBA Championships wrapping up at about the same time, AB graced us with two new bottles. A Bud Light for the Boston Bruins Stanley Cup Championship and a Budweiser for the Dallas Mavericks NBA Championship. Both bottles are the usual limited release around their perspective cities.

So far, the only thing we're seeing in baseball bottles is the usual All-Star Game bottle. This year in Arizona. Bottle is extremely close to last years design with a small Diamondbacks logo above All-Star Game.

Bud Light Lime up in Canada has given us a totally new design. Logos are smaller on the bottle and the silver has been replaced with green.

Out of nowhere a new Budweiser bottle for China has shown up. Other than a different GAN and some changes to the back panel, almost exactly the same as the bottle released back in 2006.

Finally we have discovered another sleeper, this one from the UK. A 330ml silver Budweiser bottle manufactured back in 2003. This prototype bottle has no back panel, thus no UPC or mandatory's listed. Bottle was never capped and is very limited as just a few were passed around among AB execs while they decided not to go with them. GAN number is 505704 and this sure would be a nice one to pull out of a dollar box (in my dreams...).

Killebrew now in Aluminum Bottles

Killebrew Root Beer is hitting it out of the park this year, though partially due to sad news.

The May 17 death of legendary Twins slugger Harmon Killebrew has helped boost demand for Killebrew Root Beer and Killebrew Cream Soda by 400 percent in 2011 compared to last year, said Jim Lundeen, who owns Ramsey-based RJM Distributing, which makes the brew.

Lundeen wants to be respectful of Killebrew's legacy and not let it appear that he's trying to capitalize on his death. However, he also realizes that there's a spotlight on the product and a spike in sales, and the company's challenge is to keep the brand growing. It's a task that Lundeen says is doable and has been in the works since his company acquired the brand more than a year ago. "I think that we're going to be OK. Time will tell. Sales continue to improve."

Killebrew Root Beer was founded in 1996 by Harmon's son, Kenny Killebrew. The legend for why it started varies, but supposedly Killebrew's grandfather home-brewed root beer when Harmon was a child and Harmon loved the soft drink.

The brand had a loyal following, but languished because it was such a small operation. It was in and out of several retail chains over the years, and it went through a handful of different contract manufacturers and distributors.

In its second season with the Twins, Killebrew Root Beer is still a high-demand product at Target Field, said Pete Spike, general manager of Delaware North Cos. Sportservice, which operates concessions at the stadium.

These bottles are available in and around the Minneapolis area. Also, if you're thirsty, you can order them by the case online at <http://www.killebrewrootbeer.com/buy-online.php>

Guinness in Aluminum Bottles?!

Sorry to get your hopes up but Guinness actually does not have an aluminum beer bottle.

But I did come across this really neat design for an aluminum bottle for the venerable Irish beer by someone named Julien Muller. The angular shape is quite different from most aluminum beer bottle designs which are rounded. The design is part of a project by Muller called "Prism, Stripes & Diamond bottles".

The malleability of aluminum would probably make this non-traditional design feasible. The Guinness "brand police" would probably not allow any bottle not to have their iconic Guinness logo. But theirs is a dark logo and would probably blend easily with Muller's design.

It's wonderful how aluminum bottles have become the new canvasses for today's artists and designers. And who knows, maybe we'll see Guinness in an aluminum bottle yet.
